

Limited Time Doesn't Stop Young Women in Georgia

By Deborah L. Groninger

President, New Generation RW of Fayette County, Georgia

We women in the next generation of Republican women have limited time to devote to any group they are involved in. Consequently, we want to see our investment in any volunteer group produce something that will benefit our families. We represent a wide spectrum of working women, whether it be in the workplace or in the home. We may be single or married, divorced or widowed. We share certain obstacles in life and are united in specific issues, such as taxes, immigration, child safety, and education.

NGRW Fayette County has formed an Advisory Board made up of seasoned women from established clubs who can advise and guide our Board and members as we form and develop our club. Thus, we maintain our own identity and benefit from the wisdom of experienced activists. We also hope that our new group can work hand in hand on efforts with other clubs.

Our Mission

Meet the specific needs of this generation

Political education: issues, candidates, and government

Assist Republican candidates: volunteerism, campaign involvement

Promote the Republican Party and represent the Party as a whole

Target

We target women who are eager to be involved, want to work in the community for issues that really matter to them and their families, and have potential to become future leaders in our organization as well as our community. We invite women in all surrounding counties to join us at our kick-off, as well as at our monthly meetings.

Our kick-off is the first Thursday in December 2006.

Our first meeting is the first Thursday in January 2007.

Our meetings are held at the Fayette County Republican Party Headquarters, 113 W. Glynn St., Fayetteville, Ga. (on the Fayetteville Square).

I personally challenge fellow NFRW members to begin a New Generation Club in their area. It is very important to keep Republican women alive and vibrant. We are one of the most influential groups in American politics today. Let's keep our voice strong in our own communities, as well as in Washington, D.C.
